JOURNAL OF JOHN SEVIER.

After the lapse of one hundred and five years, John Sevier, hero of thirty-five victories, first governor of Tennessee and founder of a great commonwealth, comes before us in the fragmentary diary of his last twenty-five years. It is the intimate story of much of his daily private life, the modest notations of his personal concerns, his domestic associations and, to some extent, his public services. It is a quaint document, full of interesting personalia of bygone folks and reflections of pioneer conditions. It records curious dreams and sets forth prescriptions based on primitive notions of the nature and causes of disease. It pictures Sevier the farmer and trader much more than Sevier the soldier and statesman. It hardly purports to be a diary, being rather a series of memoranda for the personal use or amusement of the writer. And yet in many aspects it is worthy of him who many times delivered our forefathers from the murderous savage; who led the valiant "over-mountain men" to victory at King's Mountain; who presided over the abortive state of Franklin; who was for twelve years governor of Tennessee; who sat for six years in the lower house of Congress; who served his people for forty years with almost no pecuniary reward; and who finally gave up his life in a distant wilderness while laying the foundations for permanent peace with the red man and progress in civilization for the white man.

One who ponders this multifarious journal must remember that the hand that made these entries was directed by the same great mind and spirit that guided and developed our early civilization; that these are generally but the commonplaces of a life that was projected with a noble vision, guided by a great destiny and led along an unswerving path of duty. He must always read with the inspiring knowledge of the great soul and the splendid deeds of him who is so inadequately—even so faintly—portrayed by himself. It is a privilege to this generation to get these hitherto unnoticed and unpublished gleanings from life and times that are now Homeric in our historical perspective and our patriotic esteem.

Its not amiss here to present a summary of the career of the author of this journal.

John Sevier, son of Valentine and Joanna Goode Sevier, was born September 23, 1745, in Augusta, now Rockingham County, Virginia; attended school at Staunton; was married to Sarah Hawkins in 1761; founded the town of Newmarket; was farmer, merchant, innkeeper and soldier; moved to Millerstown, in Shenandoah County, in 1770; moved to the Watauga settlement in 1773; moved to the Nolichucky settlement in 1778; was an extensive farmer; was married to Katherine Sherrill in 1780; co-operated with Shelby McDowell, Campbell, Cleveland and other leaders in resisting the invasion of Western North Carolina by the British forces under Ferguson; commanded the regiment of “over-mountain men” at King’s Mountain, October, 1780; commanded in thirty-four battles with Indians, his only battle order being, “Here they are, boys, come on, come on”; was governor of the independent state of Franklin, 1784-1788; was arrested for treason to North Carolina and never prosecuted; was a member of the North Carolina state senate; member of the First Congress; brigadier-general for the Washington District; governor of Tennessee, 1796-7801, 1803-1809; member of Congress, 1811, until his death, September 24, 1815, which occurred near Fort Decatur, Alabama, while he was acting as commissioner in running the boundary line of the cession made by the Creek nation.

The following opinion of Sevier, from Phelan’s “History of Tennessee,” is quoted as a just characterization of the man:

“John Sevier is the most prominent name in Tennessee History, and within these limits and upon this field he is the most brilliant military and civil figure this State has ever produced. Jackson attained a larger fame upon a broader field of action, and perhaps his mental scope may appear to fill a wider horizon to those who think his statesmanship equal to his generalship. But the results he accomplished affected the history of Tennessee only in so far as it formed a part of the United States. Sevier, however, was purely a Tennessean. He fought for Tennessee, he defined its boundaries, he watched over and guarded it in its beginning, he helped form it, and he exercised a decisive influence upon its development. It is safe to say that without Sevier the history of Tennessee would in many important respects not be what it now is. . . . His chief claim to a high order of ability is justified by his clear vision of the present needs of his people, and of the future requirements of the State whose greatness he foresaw.”

This diary was kept in the custody of George W. Sevier, the oldest child of the governor’s second marriage. He was for some time an officer in the United States Army and became secretary to William C. C. Claiborne, governor of the Mississippi Territory. He carried the diary with him to Mississippi, and finally gave it to Col. J. F. H. Claiborne for use in the first volume of his history of Mississippi; but it was never published. Through Col. Claiborne the diary, with many other Sevier papers, came into the custody of the State of Mississippi. All these papers are now in the State Department of Archives and History at Jackson, Mississippi. Years ago Hon. W. A. Henderson, of Knoxville, Tennessee, caused a copy to be made and later he presented it to the Tennessee Historical Society. It is, therefore, due to the patriotic interest and splendid generosity of Col. Henderson that the Tennessee Historical Magazine is able to present this diary of our first governor.

It is fortunate that this manuscript has been carefully examined and annotated in part by Col. H. M. Doak and Judge John Allison, both of whom came from the region where Sevier lived and had a vast knowledge of the history of Tennessee, especially of those communities of East Tennessee which are mentioned in the diary. The footnotes furnished by Judge Allison and Col. Doak are designated at the end of each by the letters “A” and “D” respectively; otherwise the notes are by the writer. The following observations were made by Col. Doak:

"Queer how the diaries of our ancestors never throw any light upon the very things their descendants 'want to know, you know.' I once bought Asbury's Journal, hoping to find something about the country and its early settlers from a man who'd tramped every pig-path of English-settled America. Asbury was a very intelligent man, a marvelous organizer. His journal is barren of all later men 'want to know, you know.' The country he traversed, by plain, mountain, flood and field, might be Asia, Africa, or the moon, for any descriptive trait of it he gives. It might have been inhabited by Chinese, chimpanzees, or angels—or devils—for any human trait, or suggestion of social life he gives—except barrenly in connection with the 'saving of souls.'

"If my revered great-grandfather, Rev. Samuel Doak, D.D., had kept a diary it would probably be as barren of all human interest for the modern man. It might have contained references to highly entertaining sermons preached at Old Salem, almost under the eaves of Washington College.

"Asbury and Doak were pioneers of two vast systems—profound thought at the base of each: Free-will and Fixed-Fate—the latter modified by Election. These are Being's two opposite poles of thought,

"'Twixt which life hovers like a star.'

Each system was great in its way. These pioneers failed to look at unfolding social life as we wish they had done. If they did, they neglected to record it in extant journals and diaries.

Sevier's diary is interesting and valuable, not as a record of social progress, but as an example of the daily life, routine and thoughts of one who was a great soldier, a thoughtful, practical statesman, a good farmer, a man of affairs, a thorough business man and a courtly gentleman, equally at home on the battlefield and in the ballroom. His journal is the mere unconscious record of daily details, without a trace or a suspicion of the vanity of him who writes to be read. As a record of daily goings and comings over wide spaces of a man of boundless impulse and restless energy and enterprise it is of incalculable value.

The manuscript is here reproduced without any change in spelling or punctuation. It was not the fashion of the pioneers to spell or punctuate correctly. Sevier was a man of fair education for those days, as well as of great intelligence. It is natural that in this journal he should be given to abbreviation. It is hoped that the explanatory notes will aid the reader in visualizing the characters, customs and events of those heroic times.

The diary begins when the author was forty-five years of age, about two years after the collapse of the State of Franklin. It continues intermittently until a few days before his death, twenty-five years and four months later.

JOURNAL OF GOVERNOR JOHN SEVIER (1790-1835).

May, 1790.

Left home1 Wednesday, 19th May, 1790, at 10 o'clock. Rained on us in the evening. Lodged that night at my father's2. 25 m. 20.

20. Sent my horses to Z. Abdis & got them shod, cost 10—

2 o'clock set out, & lodged all night at Mr. John Keewoods3. 20 mls.

Left this place 10 o'clock, received of Mr. John Keewood 9500 Dollars Virginia paper money called the forty for one money4, which I am to endeavor to exchange for Hard money.

22. Set out at 12 o'clock, fed at Genl. Campbels6 plantation, pd.

1Mt. Pleasant on the Nolichucky River. Sevier moved there from Watauga in 1778. His father, Valentine Sevier, lived at the first Watauga settlement. He died at Carter's City, December 30, 1803, at the age of one hundred years. He was born of Huguenot parents in England. The name was originally Xavier. John Sevier's mother was Joanna Goode. Valentine Sevier, with his wife, his four sons, Robert, Joseph, Abraham and John and their families, and his daughters, Polly and Catherine, arrived at the Watauga settlement from the Shenandoah Valley on December 25, 1773.

Sevier's trip here outlined was from his home to New York to take his seat in the first Congress elected after the adoption of the Constitution. He had been elected to represent the westernmost district of North Carolina, which included all of what is now Tennessee. There is no record that he had any opponent.

2His father, at this date, resided on the south side of the Holston River, probably two or three miles below the present Kingsport, near old Fort Patrick Henry. A.

3"Keewoods." Keywood, in Sullivan County, near Bristol. A.

4"Forty for one money." Curiously, Confederate currency reached forty-for-one in 1864-5, at Richmond, gold basis. D.

5"Edmiston's." Near Abingdon, Va., probably Edmondson, a prominent Virginia family, largely represented later in Tennessee. D. In early political records I found Edmonson, Edmondson and Edmiston. A.

6"Campbels." The well known Campbells, many of whom were in the Revolution. D.

It is worthy of note that Sevier paid 8d at General William Campbell's "for some green wheat." General Campbell was at King's Mountain along with Sevier. Generals Charles and Joseph McDowell and many others "lodged" and were entertained without charge at Sevier's home for some time preceding the King's Mountain expedition. It seems that no charges were made for "lodging" at Col. Arthur Campbell's. A.
8d for some Greene wheate, proceeded from thence to Col. Arth. Campbels1. Lodged there all night. 18 ms.

23. Set out in the morn. Sat. 10 o'clock. Fed our horses & dined at Engledoon2, paid 2-6. From thence to Capt. Robt. Sawyers on Reed Creek. Lodged there all night. 33 miles.

(Monday, 24th). Set out from Capt. Sawyers at 8 o'clock in the morning. Fed Horses at Mr. Carters, pd. 1—. Crossed the Ferry at Englishes, pd. 1-3. Lodged all night at Mr. Harrises, Choacked (?) my horse (?) in the morning, paid for expenses 3-8. 34 miles.

(T., 25th). Set out at 10 o'clock. Dined at McCraigs (Hans Meadow3s), pd. 4—. Fed at Mrs. Kemps, pd. 4d. Lodged at Col. I. Robertsons, P. O., 21 miles, Wednesday, 26th.

Set out at 7 o'clock. Breakfast at Mrs. Aierly (?), pd. 2-6. Lodged all night at Mrs. Brackenridges4, pd. 2-6. 25 miles.

Set out on the 27th, Thursday morning. Breakfasted at Mr. Leatherdales. Called on D. Wood & got white vitrol for my eyes. Fed at Andersons Ferry, pd. 1-3. Lodged at Mr. Berkleys, pd. 4-8. 30 miles.

Friday, 28th. Set out 9 o'clock. Arrived at Lexington 1 o'clock. Tarried all night. 12 miles.

Saturday, 29th. It rained. Lay by till Sunday morning, the 30th. At 9 o'clock set out for Staunton5, arrived there 8 o'clock. Lodged all night (rained, went in the morning to visit Mr. McClanahan (?), Colonel Alexr. McClanahan, Mrs. Reed & some other acquains. Bought of Col. Gamble a pr. Boots, price 40—, paid Mr. Herschal with whom I lodged for Epenses 15-9. 35 miles.

7The Campbells here mentioned are General William Campbell, of King's Mountain fame, and his cousin and brother-in-law, Col. Arthur Campbell, who was impeached as judge of the Washington County, Virginia, court for an attempt to have all that part of Virginia west of the Blue Ridge joined to the State of Franklin. He was never tried on these charges. These kinsmen lived near Abingdon, the county seat of Washington County, in earlier times known as "Wolf Hills." A.

8Engledoon." Engle's Ferry, or ford, on New River, in Wythe County, Virginia, on the main road between the Southwest and the East. A.

"Hans Meadows," should be "Max Meadows," as that is the name by which it has always been called. A.

12"Mrs. Brackenridges," should be "Breckenridges," as records at Abingdon and in other parts of southwest Virginia have it. A.

13Staunton, Augusta County, Virginia, whence came Rev. Samuel Doak, D.D., after referred to by Sevier. From Augusta and the adjoining county of Rockbridge came to Tennessee the Doaks, Cowans, Alexanders, Montgomerys, Paxtons, Houstons, Tates, Walkers, Caruthers, Lilies, Mitchells and many others, mostly Scotch or Scotch from northern Ireland. D. The route was down the Shenandoah Valley.
Monday, 31st. I left Staunton about 3 o'clock. Arrived at Rockingham at 8 o'clock (evening). Lodged all night at Mr. Rutherford's, being 25 miles. pd. for Oats 1-.

[From July 1, 1790, to October 9, 1793, there is no entry in the diary. The following notes relate to the Etowah Campaign, the last in which Sevier was engaged. Etowah was where the present city of Rome, Georgia, is located. On November 21, 1789, President Washington commissioned Sevier as Brigadier-General of the Watauga District, and he held this commission during the Etowah Campaign. It was the only military service for which he ever received any compensation from the government. His force consisted of six or seven hundred men under Colonel John Blair, of the Washington District, and Col. Christian, of the Hamilton District. The expedition resulted in complete victory. The Creeks and Cherokees were terribly punished and were never again a menace to the settlements in Tennessee. Sevier's official report is found on pages 1587-8 of Ramsey's Annals.]

21From the region of Lancaster, Pa., came many of the Scotch Irish to Virginia and North Carolina.
22"Turkshead," a tavern. Evidently named for the celebrated meeting place of Burke, Garrick, Reynolds, Johnson, Goldsmith and others in London. I have read somewhere that there is a room in this old town which was occupied by General Washington in which remain the old bedstead and bureau which were there when he occupied it. A.
23"Sculkill Ferry," on the Schuykill River which flows by Philadelphia into Chesapeake Bay. A.
24Col. Josiah Parker, of "Macclesfield," Isle of Wight County, Virginia, member of the Virginia conventions of 1775 and 1776; colonel in Continental line, participated in important battles under Washington; member of House of Delegates, 1780-1784; member of Congress, 1789-1801; married Mary Bridger; died 1810. His kinsman, Nathaniel Parker, went from Hampshire County to Tennessee about 1785 and became one of the first settlers of Sumner County. His second wife was the widow of Anthony Bledsoe. It is very disappointing that Sevier's journal gives no account of this memorable first Congress.

[The diary is from this time a curious intermixture of incidental data, weather notations, dreams and social happenings. Sevier lived from 1778 to 1794 at Mount Pleasant, on his farm on the Nolichucky River, about ten miles southwest of Jonesboro and about eight miles southeast of Washington College, in Washington County. He was in the heyday of his popularity. What follows gives some indication of a peaceful domestic life.]

T 9 cloudy. Frank came here. Blooded Mr. Weir, G. Gillaspy served (ex 'o) Jno Sevier Junr vs Taylor execr.

Mary Ann Sevier, sixth child of John and Sarah Sevier, born about 1771. She married Joshua Corlin and moved to Overton County.

John Sevier, Jr., the third son, was born June 20, 1766, and married Soochia Garrett. Their daughter, Anna, married Henry Hoss, and their son was the late Bishop E. E. Hoss.

Mrs. Sevier was Katherine Sherrill, beloved in history as “Bonny Kate.” The romantic story of her rescue from the Indians by Sevier is well known. They were married on August 14, 1780, the year in which the first wife died. Katherine Sherrill Sevier was eminently worthy to be the wife of her great husband. She was the helpmeet and inspiration of thirty-five years of public service marked with great vicissitude. They had eight children: George Washington, Samuel, Ruth (m. first Col. Richard Sparks, then Daniel Vertner), Katherine (m. first Archibald Rea, then Mr. Campbell), Polly Preston (m. Wm. Overstreet), Joanna Goode (m. Windle), Eliza Conway (m. Major Wm. McClellan), and Robert. The names of the daughters are frequently mentioned in the diary.

After the death of Governor Sevier his widow moved to a secluded place, called “The Dale,” in Clay County, and lived there for many years. Governor Sevier located two grants for something over 57,000 acres in Overton and Clay counties. On this land many members of his family settled. Mrs. Sevier, his sons, George W. Sevier, Dr. Samuel Sevier, Valentine Sevier, and daughters, Katherine Campbell, Joanna Windle, Mary Overstreet, Sarah Brown and Ann Corlin. Mrs. Katherine Sherrill Sevier died October 2, 1836, at Russellville, Alabama, where she had recently gone to live with her son, Dr. Samuel Sevier.

Th “J. Gelliher” here mentioned was probably the father of James Gallaher, the clergyman and author of “Western Sketch Book.” A.

Sun. 12 went to see Mr. Weir he is some better Received letter from G. Blount sent by James Gallispie 12th Mr. Harrill dined here on his way to Guare (?)

Mon 13 cloudy Blooded Mr. Weir (Snowed)

Tues. 14 Mr. Murphy dined here

On the 14th Jany John Sevier Genl Dreamed he was in an unknown country Supposed from some immagination that it was france, at which place his son Dickky came to see him, & welcomed him there, thought that his son Dickky was in a military Service Dressed in dove couloured Silk cloth trimed wth blue satin & said to me I will go with you to head quarters & introduce you to the Commander in Chief to which proposal I agreed & as we went there appeared the largest number of people ever beheld & all in quiet being some distance I conversed with him on the way respecting his fare and how he liked the service, to which he replied that the fair was better than he could describe the officers had taken great notice of him, and he was well contented to remain there all his days. I thought we gradually ascended towards the top of a high Hill of beautiful ground where there stood a large building which appeared to be built of either Diamond or Glass as I could see through the walls with doors & windows all round. The same we entered in, and immediately ascended the first pair of stairs. My son going before me, then proceeding up the second, then the third &c till we go to a very great height, the building still appearing to be a great height above us, he then told me they had the best station that was ever formed, for says he, we can from this place see all the nations in the world & what the armies are doing pointed out at the same time Large Countrys & Cities. Told me that such a place was Russia, another that was Germany, then prussia England, Holland, Denmark Turky and as well as I can remember all the Countries in the known world. They seemed to lie at a great distance, looking like great piles of old buildings, both in Cities & Countries & of different sizes,

The Sevier farm on Nola Chuckee, home and buildings were a marvel of fertility, comfort, convenience and tools for all kinds of farm work and production. The following is a fair sample of the old Sevier establishment. The Cowan house, about twelve miles north from the Sevier farm was built by John Cowan from Virginia, a soldier of 1812. It was a large two-story frame, with long upper and lower porches and ample back porch, gigantic rock chimneys, roof of walnut shingles, fastened on with walnut pegs. A big two-story rock springhouse contained all needful dairy paraphernalia, although only the family and farm hands were to be supplied. A vast double-log barn contained hay mows, threshing floor, graneries, and horse stalls. There were stored plows, harrows, harness, flails for threshing grain, sickles, reaping-hooks, the long English scythe blade and crooked snath, the clumsy Dutch scythe with short blade and straight snath. There were two kinds of English scythes, a broader blade and a long narrow blade, known as the “black-snake scythe.” There were many antiquated implements, known to Scotch farmers. At the house and in outhouses were all that pertains to the household, all that goes with production of flaxen and woolen fabrics, backles, scutches, with long, swordlike wooden scutching-knives, brakes, small spinning-wheels for fine yarns, reels for “banking” woolen yarns in “crets.” There were looms for weaving all kinds of cloth. In the garret were John Cowan’s old leathern helmet, sword-belt and sabre, old muskets and flint-lock pistols. Scattered on the floor were numerous Irish, English and a few American periodicals.

This description is by an eye-witness and frequenter of the Cowan house and is fairly descriptive of the John Sevier place, only that it is reputed to have been upon a larger scale of provision for everything. D.
lying all around the place we stood which appeared to be so high that we had an easy view of all the world; notwithstanding we were not near the top my son told me I could not see the commander in chief at that time, but he would introduce me some other time. I then began to take great notice of the beauty of the palace, I thought I was then in; everything appeared to be all light & beauty & wondered that I had never seen nor heard of such a building before & that other nations had not built in the same advantageous manner, on which I awoke.

42Joseph Sevier, born 1763, was the oldest child. He married an Indian woman. His son, Rev. Jack Sevier, was a Methodist preacher. (Heiskell, p. 201.)
43Tis worthy of note that billiards was played in Knoxville in 1794. It shows how the backwoods kept up in the graces of civilization. Not many centuries have eclipsed since an advanced Frenchman was burned at Paris as a wizard for billiard shots that would be commonplace now and perhaps Sevier might have made. D.
44Rev. Samuel Carrick, 1760-1809, a Presbyterian minister; native of Pennsylvania, educated in Virginia; president of Blount College, later the University of Tennessee, from its beginning in 1794 until his death.
45"Poroughed," proroged. The word has not come down to this day and was seldom used then in political speech. We would say, adjourned, in almost any case. D.

49"Mrs. Sevier went to Embree." Embreeville was a furnace village in sight from the Sevier farm on Nola Chuckee River, said to have been named for Elihu Embree, who edited the first abolition newspaper in America, at Jonesboro. His son, Elihu Embree, Jr., served in the 19th Tennessee, C. S. A. D.

Embreeville, or "Embree," as it was sometimes referred to, was then, and still is, on the south side of the Nolo or Noli Chucky River right at the foot of the Unaka, a spur of the larger Iron Mountain, both part of the Appalachian Range; and the Sevier home place was about two miles down the river on the north side. It is very probable that smoke from the old time furnace stack and from charcoal pits was "in sight" of the Sevier home, but not in sight of buildings or Embreeville Village. A.

49"Frank ran away." While a horse gifted with the name of Franklin—quite popular in 1794—might have been the Frank that ran away, we are enlightened further along on page 17 that the "run-away nigger" had come to be a feature of that early day. D.

Doak, Balch and Houston, all were prominent Presbyterian clergymen of the day, and all are yet represented by descendants in Tennessee. Rev. Houston was very prominent in the early politics of Tennessee, a profound political scholar. D. "Rev. Houston" took an active part in organizing the last state of Franklin, was the author of a proposed constitution for the state, under the provisions of which it was said there were few persons but preachers who could have qualified as state or county officials. See Haywood and later histories of Tennessee. A. Rev. Hezekiah Balch founded Greeneville College in 1794, and was its first president; Tusculum College was begun as Tusculum Academy in 1818 by Samuel Doak.

This was an extra session of the territorial legislature which met June 29, 1795. Upon nomination of this body, President Washington commissioned John Sevier, Griffith Rutherford, James Winchester, Stockly Donelson and Parmenas Taylor as the Council.

'Tis gratifying to know that the noble game of whist had not yet given way for the vulgar game of poker. D.

August 1795.

Sat. 1st. came home in company with Walter King & George Gordon.

Sun. 2 went to hear a sermon preached by Mr. Cobler at James Seviers. Mon. 3rd. Sent 150 land warrants* 640 acres each By Geo. Gordon to No. Carolina to Get Titles for the same, to be laid on Each Side of Cumberland near the mouth of Obias River (sup-

*Willie Blount, half brother of Gov. Wm. Blount, was governor of Tennessee, 1809-1815. His later home was in Montgomery County. Thomas Blount, brother of Gov. Wm. Blount, was an officer in the Revolutionary Army and was afterwards a member of Congress from the Edgecomb District (N. C.) until his death in 1812. (Heiskell, p. 82.)

Gov. Sevier attends house-raisings on two successive days. House-raisings, corn-shuckings, and log-rollings were altruistic neighborly festive occasions. Closely related were quiltings and "apple-butter bilin's." D.

*Mark and Sam Mitchell lived at Brownsboro, a few miles below the Sevier farm. They were close kin to the Miss Mitchell who married the father of Rev. Samuel Doak and also kin to Hon. John Mitchell, the "Irish Patriot," a very eloquent Irish exile, who canvassed Tennessee as a democrat, 1850 to 1856, edited a democratic paper at Knoxville, served in C. S. A., went back to Ireland and was elected to parliament, refused his seat, re-elected and died. A son was born in Richmond, Va., during the Civil war, whose son, Jno. Purroy Mitchell was Mayor of New York until 1918. In 1850 Sam and Gum Mitchell, bachelors, were living at Brownboro, managing the farm and the mill. D.

*Col. John Carter, famous in the history of the Watauga settlement. He was chairman of the convention which drew up and signed the Watauga articles of government, "the first written constitution adopted by the consent of a free and independent people of America." (Garrett and Goodpasture's History of Tennessee. He was the first colonel of the militia of Washington County. He lived about half a mile north of "Watauga Old Fields," now Elizabethton, in Carter County. Landon Carter was at this time (1795) entry taker for the district.

This recital of land warrants recalls the celebrated controversy which was instituted by Sevier's enemies in 1802 when Governor Roane cast the deciding vote between Sevier and Andrew Jackson in favor of Jackson for the position of Major-General of Tennessee militia. It became the principal issue later in that year when Sevier ran successfully against Roane for the governorship. (See Garrett and Goodpasture's History, p. 143; also the case of Polk vs. Windle, 2 Tenn., 118, 433.)

*Obey River. It rises in Fentress County, flows northwardly through Fentress and Overton and empties into Cumberland River in the central part of Clay County. The 57,000 acres which were owned by Sevier and later owned and occupied by his widow and children, were probably a part of the lands described in the grants mentioned. These grants were dated August 28, 1795.

This river, from where it ceases to be Toe River in North Carolina, down to Cocke County, Tennessee, with its succession of falls, rapids and dangerous fords, and with its rapid "freshets," probably has the record among American rivers for drownings of unwary travelers. D.

One of the most dangerous of these fords was "Red Bank" in what is now Unicoi County, even during my time and knowledge of it persons were drowned in that ford constantly. There is now a bridge near where the "Red Bank" was. A.

Another of the fords was "Red Bank" in what is now Unicoi County, even during my time and knowledge of it persons were drowned in that ford constantly. D.

August 17, 1795. "Went to G. muster." Doubtless "grand muster" is meant. From 1850 to 1860 musters were called "big muster," or "battalion muster," and "pettit muster." As training for war they were, doubtless, useful in Sevier's day when they were for definite war ends in sight. Later they were merely holiday occasions, where "stud-horses" were shown, women showed their finery and men drank "'simmon beer" (persimmon), honey-locust beer, apple-brandy and whiskey and everybody ate ginger-bread.

In 1862, perhaps the last muster was seen by a Confederate soldier who had been wounded at the battle of Shiloh. Bent on recruiting a company in his old county, dressed in full Confederate uniform, he was riding by McCalister's School House. Rising the long hill he saw in the woods that lined the road a federal flag flying and a big company drilling, his old college-mate, George Wilson, in command. The situation was perilous, although "bushwhacker" outrages had not yet begun. The Confederate soldier said, as coolly as he could, with cold chills running down his spine: "Good morning, George!" George replied: "How are you, Mel?" Nothing more was said and nothing was done. George was killed in the Federal service, reputed a gallant soldier. D. Col. Doak says, "Everybody ate ginger bread," and should have added, "and washed it down with apple cider." A.

The Trimble mentioned was probably an ancestor of Hon. John Trimble, an able lawyer of Nashville, who married a sister of Gov. Neil S. Brown. The Trimbles were kin to the Jordans and Doaks of Washington County. D.

8Mention of South Carolina here and in many places. In those early days and down to 1861 relations, especially trade relations, were close between East Tennessee and South Carolina, intermarriages frequent. There were always many students from South Carolina at Washington College. Trade with Augusta and neighbor South Carolina marts was quite large. D. Especially Charleston. A.

8Mention of Mathews. The reference is probably to a "Mathes"—a very large family. Perhaps as many as a dozen Mathes heads of families owned farms within a few miles of Washington College, leading members of Old Salem church—a very enterprising, energetic and progressive stock. D. They were elders in Old Salem church continuously for 120 years. A.

The old warrior, statesman and thorough business man makes far less noise recording his inauguration as governor than was made by the sixteen-round salute fired in his honor. The honor is recorded about as record is made of the sale of a hog. The inaugural ceremonies occupy less space than weather changes. D.

Judge John McNairy of Nashville, judge of the Superior Court for Mero District, 1789; one of the territorial judges until 1796; member for Davidson County of the Constitutional Convention of 1796; judge of the United States District Court, 1797-1834. 88This address was brief and mainly salutatory. It is to be found on pp. 659 and 660 of Ramsey’s Annals.

89Willie Blount, Archibald Roane and John McNairy were the judges of the Superior Court. McNairy lived at Nashville. He was appointed United States judge in 1792 and held that position until 1834. Blount resigned from the Superior Court in 1796. He was governor of Tennessee, 1809-1815. He became a resident of Montgomery County and died there in 1835. His name is especially illustrious for his great ability and efficiency as governor during the War of 1812 and the Creek War.

90The early records of Davidson County show the names, Thomas Dillon; Isaac, John, David, Robert, Joseph, Peter, James, George, and Alexander Johnston; James, William, Daniel, and David Ross; William Terrill; John, Sherrod, Micaiah, and Willie Barrow; and Thomas Mulloy, who shared with Edward Douglas the honor of being the first lawyer at Nashville. Mulloy was one of the signers of the Cumberland compact. He died about 1816. Willie Barrow was a son of Micajah Barrow and father of Washington Barrow, prominent in business and politics in the succeeding generation.

The route then traveled from Knoxville to Nashville was the old road which began at Leas Springs in Grainger County and ran through the present counties of Knox, Roane, Morgan, Fentress, Overton, Jackson, Smith, Trousdale, Sumner and Davidson. It was opened by militia in 1787. The Walton Road, which ran mainly through the tier of counties just southward, was opened about 1799.

91William Maclin, secretary of state of Tennessee, 1796-1807. Little is known of him. He seems to have removed finally to Davidson County and died there.

George Washington Sevier, the eldest child of the second marriage—now about fifteen years old. He was Circuit Court clerk of Overton County; served for many years in the army and became a colonel in 1814. He married Katherine Chambers and had eleven children, the second of whom married A. W. Putnam, the author of a history of Middle Tennessee. Col. Putnam, at his own expense, erected a monument to John Sevier in the City Cemetery at Nashville. (Heiskell, p. 203.)

August 2, 1796. William Blount and William Cocke elected as the first United States Senators from Tennessee. Blount was the handsome, courtly and popular territorial governor. He had been a member of the Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787. In July, 1797, he was expelled from the Senate for writing a letter to James Carey, an Indian interpreter, which, it was charged, was for the purpose of employing him "as an engine to alienate the affections and confidence of the Indians from the public officers of the United States residing among them." His hold upon the confidence of the people was unshaken. He was elected to the state senate and was made speaker. He died March 1, 1800.

William Cocke was a remarkable man. He was born in Virginia in 1748 and died in Mississippi in 1828. He was a companion of Daniel Boone on one of his exploring expeditions into eastern Tennessee and western Kentucky; was employed by Richard Henderson to aid in establishing settlers in Transylvania; was in the Kings' Mountain campaign; was a leader in the State of Franklin; member of the Constitutional Convention of 1796; served as United States Senator until 1805; was Sevier's most valued and trusted adviser; was elected circuit judge in 1809; moved to Mississippi in 1812; at the age of 65 volunteered for the War of 1812 and served with efficiency and gallantry; was a member of the legislature of Mississippi. He was an effective orator. (Caldwell's Bench and Bar, p. 24; Life by Wm. Godrich, American Historical Magazine, Vol. III.) Andrew Jackson was the representative in Congress from Tennessee at this time.

100Was this the George Conway who was major-general of Tennessee militia and whose death in 1801 brought about the contest between Sevier and Jackson for the office, which was decided by Governor Roane's vote for Jackson? 101"Mero District." Part of Middle Tennessee was once so called, named for Mero, Spanish governor of Southwest territories, at New Orleans. Robertson had this compliment paid Mero as a diplomatic tribute, during negotiations concerning navigation of the Mississippi. The early settlers of Middle Tennessee were sadly hampered by Spanish trade and navigation relations. D.
